No Pressure...No Diamonds Rosie the Riveter Mines for Diamonds
Paula Morton RN. AB, MSW, QID
In this session Paula will help us to deal with burnout. Pressure and heat, miles underground, create valuable diamonds that can be mined. We learn new things about ourselves and others when we are in ”pressured” situations. We can’t do anything about the limitations of physics, and we can never do enough to change the limitations of our culture. But we can begin today on changing the internal limits we place on ourselves. This last year brought “pressured” situations for us all. What valuable diamonds have you mined for yourself this year?

Riveting News from the Covid War Zone: Activity Professionals Combat ISOLATION, DEPRESSION, and FEAR and FIGHT for QUALITY on the front lines of LTC!

Debbie Afasano, BSN, RN, CDONA, HCRM

(1.5 Clock Hours)

The Covid Pandemic has unsettled our world and impacted on the most vulnerable populations we serve in LTC. The role of Activity Professionals has never been more essential than now, as we fight against COVID-19 and the invisible potential killer that requires quarantines, isolation, lock downs, testing, and separation from the world and loved ones. Our lives have changed and theirs have been turned upside down and inside and out. But YOU have been front line heroes! Across our state and nation, activity professionals have taken the lead to combat isolation, depression, fear. They are the bridge between loved ones and the outside world. They bring smiles, laughter and hope to those we serve. Our Activity Warriors fight for quality and push for answers amid this troubling pandemic. This presentation will allow time to share their stories, and inspire us to continue the fight for quality, and acknowledge their incredible importance.
